(a) The story of England's most famous legendary King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table has been captivating readers through the ages. King Arthur's deeds have been narrated in songs and stories throughout Europe. (b) There are some mysterious stories about his birth and death. Before arthur king, uthur Pendragon ruled with the help and advice of the wise old magician Merlin. But the king died in sorrow as he had no heir. After his death, says one story, the queen gave birth to a son. Merlin, who was afraid that the cruel Lords might kill Uther's child, secretly entrusted the child to faithful Sir Ector who had a soon named Key. Another story sounds more mysterious According to this story, a curious incident took place after Uther's death. Once when Merlin went out of the castle, he saw a strange ship on the great waves of the sea. Then one of the waves broke in fire as Merlin's feet.

Merliin caught sight of a baby in the fire. he believed that the baby was Uther's heir and entrusted him to Sir Ector. (c) Sir Bedivere now regretted how much he had injured the king by his dealy; for the throwing of the sword was a message asking for help to the king. He could not find words to express his deep sorrow. But he knelt down on one knee, drew the king's hands over his shoulder, carefully lifted him on his back and walked as quickly as possible down the hill. (d) As they reached the shore of the lake, they caught sight of a black ship, with black sails, with stately figures crowding the deck all attired in black. They took Arthur on board and the ship left for an unknown destination. No one knew whether Arthur lived or died. his death was as great mystery as his birth. (e) Stung by the king's words, Sir bedivere ran quickly down to the lake. Closing his eyes, lest the sight of the wonderful jewels should tempt him again, he pulled out the sword and raised it high. Then he threw it far off. As he opened his eyes, he saw an arm rise out of the water, seize the sword, wave it three times, and disappear under the water the sword. (f) "My days are over; it is time for me to go," said Arthur, and his voice was low and weak. "Carry me down to the edge of the lake as quickly as possible. I fear that I my die before you reach there."
